
TYRONE STORMWATER NEWS UPDATE

SUMMER 2020

BRAD KONWICK, ENVIRONMENTAL DEPARTMENT

Increased development, aging infrastructure, along with above average rainfall this year, has made managing stormwater an important issue for local governments. While stormwater management involves both protecting water quantity and water quality, the public often sees the quantity effects, in the form of flooding and erosion. This article helps to explain possible solutions to complex stormwater problems, which can include green infrastructure, new regulations, and stormwater utilities among others.

